I am from Artesia, New Mexico, about 4 hours south of Albuquerque (town of 11,000).

I got my start in the biz as an actress, which introduced me to producing .

I am currently working as a Freelance Producer.

The project I am most excited about is 13 Hours in a Warehouse, a feature I produced last year which is set to be released on October 28, 2008 with a worldwide distribution deal.

In ten years I see myself producing many different projects that will help raise awareness in the community, as well as entertain and educate.

The best part about being a member of MN WIFT is meeting and creating relationships with other women in the industry.

I think we can strengthen the community of women in production by creating a support system that not only helps each other on current and future projects but also shows up physically to support past projects at showings and such.

Most people don't know that I want to pursue my acting career, as well as produce.

If I could be anywhere in the world right now it would be on a movie set in the Bahamas getting paid an obscene amount of money!

Three people I would love to meet are (no response).
